This topographic map depicts the Grose Valley region in Italy. The Grose river flows horizontally across the center of the map. Several towns are labeled, including Geresole Reale in the upper left, Grosevallo in the center, Chialamberto in the center-right, and Geres in the lower right. Other locations shown are Noasca in the upper right, Balme in the lower left, and Ala di Stura in the lower center. The map features a network of brown contour lines representing elevation, with specific points marked as 413NE, 412NO, 412SO, 412SE, 551NO, and 551NE. A dense network of blue lines represents the river system and its tributaries. The terrain is characterized by numerous small, light blue patches, likely representing snow or ice, and a complex pattern of brown lines indicating the valley's topography.
